To Janet Henny,

In regard to "Olestra", I would just like to say that I think from my own experience, that it would certainly be a mistake to not have warnings of the possible side effects of this substance on any package that contains this.

My own experience was horrible! I did not eat alot of the chips, but was eating some everyday. I did not read the label until one day I saw this being discussed on TV. Sure enough that was my problem. I thought that I had something bad wrong with my colon. It was a relief to find out that it was something that I was eating. I suppose some people are not affected by it, however, I am glad that I was not eating very many. I would hate to think what I would have experienced if I had been. I did have to have a Drs. help, the pain was great and the other was embarrassing.

The Label should be bigger if anything.

Most Sincerely,
Patricia Ann Crigler
